

HUMAN ERRORS

NAME: SAMI, SADMAN KABIR

ID: 18-37378-1

SECTION: B

Definition Of Slip

- ❑ At the very beginning we will get to know what is slip very shortly.
- ❑ Slips are always small things. “Cognitive Error” is another name for slip. Slip is proportional to species level. The higher-level species create higher slips.

Capture Errors

- ❑ A capture error is a mistake where less of the time happening conduct is executed inappropriately on the grounds that a more recognizable way of behaving rules, in this way making the misstep happen.

Capture Errors (Example)

- ❑ A few days back I went to the bazaar to buy some lemons. Suddenly I met an old friend of mine. We hugged each other and started gossiping. Then we went to a tea stall. We started enjoying tea and each other's accompany. After that, I came back home without buying lemons. I totally forgot about lemons.
- ❑ This is called Capture Error.

Description Errors

- ❑ A description error is an error that happens when an individual plays out the right activity on some unacceptable item because of lacking determination of in an activity that would have prompted an ideal outcome.
- ❑ It often occurs when usually wrong and right objects are physically close to each other.

Description Errors (Example)

- ❑ Just yesterday I was trying to access my LinkedIn account with my mobile phone. But I clicked on the Facebook icon and accessed my Facebook account directly by mistake. Because I thought it was the LinkedIn icon at first. It happened to me because both of the icons look a little bit similar and both of the icons were close to each other.
- ❑ This is called Description Error.

Data-Driven Errors

- ❑ when a programmed routine applies some unacceptable data in light of the fact that some unacceptable data was promptly accessible to discernment.

Data-Driven Errors (Example)

- ❑ A few days ago I met an old uncle of mine. He didn't recognize me at first and said to me "Who are you?". I replied to him "I am good and how are you?". I was supposed to say to him who am I but instead of that, I said to him how am I. It's not that I heard him wrong. It's just become my habit. It's like built-in on my mind that people will ask me "Hi", "Hello", or "How are you?" on first interaction and I'll reply to him with "Hi", "Hello", or "I am fine".
- ❑ This is called Data-Driven Error.

Associative Activation Errors

- ❑ It is an error that happens when an idea or related thought obstructs this activity when it isn't proper.

Associative Activation Errors (Example)

- ❑ My mother bought a dedicated spice paste box few months ago to put spice pastes on that. Before that she used put spice pastes on an ice cream box. Then one day she asked me to bring the spice paste box from the deep fridge. I came back with the ice cream box, despite being aware of the fact that my mother started to put spice pastes on the dedicated spice paste box.
- ❑ This is called Associative Activation Error.

Loss-of-Activation-Errors

- ❑ This is an error that happens while, subsequent to starting objective coordinated conduct, the justification behind it is neglected to begin it.
- ❑ Normally this type of error occurs for the short term memory problem.

Loss-of-Activation-Errors (Example)

- ❑ Just yesterday I was in a meeting with a few of my friends for the Engineering Shop Laboratory project discussion via google meet. I joined the meeting with both my laptop and mobile. Because of internet issues if I disconnected somehow from one device I'll be still logged with another one. When the meeting ended I left the meeting from my laptop and forgot about leaving the meeting from my mobile.
- ❑ This is called Loss-of-Activation-Error.

Mode Errors

- ❑ This is a kind of slip where a client plays out an activity proper to one circumstance experiencing the same thing, normal in programming with numerous modes.

Mode Errors (Example)

- ❑ This type of error often happens to me. For example, a few days ago I went to shower. Before going to the shower I turned on the geyser as it was winter. I finished my shower and came back. Then after half an hour, I went to the washroom again. I opened the water tap. A few seconds later the water almost burned my hand. Then I realize that I forgot to turn off the geyser that time.
- ❑ This is called Mode Error.

Thank You!